Reflection on During an Interview -Talking about Oneself

During an Interview -Talking about Oneself talks about how a job interview goes on in the beginning. The dialogue conducts with two people who are the interviewer and the job applicant, and the job applicant introduces herself to the interviewer. What I learned from this dialogue is the valued skill for college students who seek a job after graduation, which is to express one's advantages to others to gain the job opportunity. For example, we can talk about our previous experiences in the related field and the contributions we have made for the prior company. In that case, we can show our capability to bring the company benefits. In short, after learning from this dialogue, I knew how to do better in the job interview. Hoping that in the future, I can really use these skills I learned today for the job interview and perform the best of me for interviewees.
